Notes:

An effective context statement serves not only as a source for community history, but also as a written description of the historic character of the neighborhood. You may wish to refer to additional historic resources to assist in the development of this section. The Planning Department has historic context information for many of its community plan areas which you may find useful, contact HPOZ Planning staff for more information.

You may want to include a brief chronology of development in the HPOZ, centering on the period of significance identified in the Historic Resources Survey. It may be helpful to give perspectives as to why the area developed the way it did, what type of residents and businesses were initially established, and how the neighborhood changed over time.
